

Abstract

Embololic protection devices and methods of making and using the same. An embolic protection device may include a shaft or filter wire having a filter coupled thereto. The filter wire may include a proximal section and a distal section. The 5 proximal and distal sections may be coupled with a connector.